Empowering trans activists across the region

Through this webinar series, we aim to strengthen the capacity of trans activists and advocates from Central Asia, the Caucasus and Eastern Europe to effectively engage with UN human rights mechanisms by providing practical knowledge, tools, and strategies for impactful international advocacy.

These webinars will help you:

- Understand key UN mechanisms relevant to human rights of trans people, including the UPR, Special Procedures, and Treaty Bodies
- Build practical skills for submitting communications, drafting shadow reports, and developing SMART recommendations and oral statements
- Plan strategically for UN engagement that fits your country's context and your group's priorities
- Connect and collaborate with other trans activists across the region to support shared learning and advocacy

About the trainer

Kseniya Kirichenko (she/her) is an international human rights lawyer, legal researcher, and intersectional feminist with over 20 years of experience in human rights advocacy, litigation, policy analysis, legal aid, and community organising. Kseniya has worked with UN human rights mechanisms to advance SOGIESC rights since 2009, most recently leading the UN Programme at ILGA World. She has authored numerous submissions to UN human rights bodies, as well as reports and practical guides on using UN mechanisms in SOGIESC and trans advocacy. Kseniya has led cases before UN treaty bodies and published articles on the subject in legal journals.

Book your spot

This series is free and open to trans activists and advocates based in Central Asia, the Caucasus, and Eastern Europe. No prior experience with UN mechanisms is required — just a commitment to learning and engaging in collective advocacy.
